

Create a New* Journal/Blog

For this new film, you will again keep a pictorial production journal via a weekly journal/blog.

1) Create a blog and share the address here*.

2) You will be documenting your March Film by keeping a visual record of the film's progress and your contributions. You have (A) a required number of images, (B) a requirement that the images relate to your role, as well as (C) required captions. You may add more than the minimal documentation necessary, but be sure to include what is required. And (D) – for IB Film testers.

(A) Each week, you are required to have at least 5 posted images (there are 4 weeks total).

These images can be location scouts, action shots, framing snap-shots, scrip annotations, screenshots, hand-drawn pictures/sketches, etc. Group members may have few images in common, but keep this to a minimum.

Aim for the images to be related to your role when possible (see below).

(B) The majority of your weekly images need to relate to your specific production role.

You are essentially highlighting your role in the production.

While you are also most likely contributing to the production in many different ways, the blog will show that your role is an essential part of the process. This may be harder to show some weeks vs others, but you can do it (captions may help, see below).

(C) The majority of your weekly images must have captions.

The captions need to say something about the production and/or your role. Use film language.

ie: For a pic of two actors at a table, don't just say "Jim and John sit at the table" – instead: "Jim and John wait for the lighting person to make the light softer, the key lighting made them look too happy" – or whatever is it that they are doing/waiting for.

(D) IB Film Testers only: must also must reflect on your role weekly. These are the starter ideas provided by IB, or you can reflect however you choose. Be sure to be specific, use film language, and write no less than a couple paragraphs for each entry.

Before your start adding your images, would you please add a title/caption on your document that states your production role/s.

When's it due? The images should be added on a daily-ish basis, though the blog entries will be checked for completion the Sunday evening for the week prior at 8pm (that would be on 3/17, 3/24, 3/31, & one last check, tbd → see last due date info here).

Entries will not be given credit if they are turned in late, BUT the portfolio as a whole will be a cumulative assessment at the end of the production, so doing entries late will be beneficial.

* IB Film Testers, you will be continuing your Film Portfolio document, please add your link here or email it to me – see email sent yesterday, 3/11 at 3ish pm.
